

October 15, 2007

To Whom It May Concern:

As a designer in the commercial and residential construction industry for the past twenty years, I have worked with many contractors in numerous building trades. I have had the pleasure of working with Mike Hogan, owner of Pinnacle Peaks Construction, for the last two years on tile and stone installations for many of the residential projects that I have designed.

Mike and his staff have consistently been incredibly professional. They are very knowledgeable about tile and stone products, product specifications and installation methods and techniques. In addition, Mike is most concerned with delivering an excellent quality job that is done properly so that the client is pleased. I view working with him as having a partner on a project that will assure that the product I specify is appropriate for the specified usage and that the design is executed in the manner as intended. Mike will often make suggestions to make a design even better, either for aesthetic or budget reasons, because of his vast industry expertise.

In conclusion, I would recommend Mike and his staff without reservation for any tile or stone installations you may have.

Sincerely,
Patty Ramey
Designer